Judiciary Committee's Hearing Room Filled As Those Opposing F. D.'s Choice For Court Job Appear

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—(INS)—Consideration of a presidential appointment to the supreme court brought a throng to the tiny hearing room of the senate judiciary committee today.

Prof. Felix Frankfurter, famed Harvard university law professor, the nominee, was not present as a group of critics of his appointment assembled to present arguments. Dean Acheson, undersecretary of the treasury in the early part of the Roosevelt administration, was designated by Frankfurter as an observer. Years ago Acheson was secretary to the late Associate Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

MOONEY, ONCE SOCIALIST, TO BE DEMOCRAT

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10—(INS)—For years, before he was sent to San Quentin prison for a 22 year period which Gov. Culbert L. Olson branded as a "wrongful imprisonment," Tom Mooney, the pardoned labor hero, was one of the staunchest champions of socialism in the United States.

But today, Mooney disclosed he was going to quit the Socialist party.

"Now that I'm a citizen again," Mooney said, "I'm going to the city hall and register as a voter."

"What will be your party affiliation?" he was asked.

Mooney paused for a full minute before replying, apparently reluctant to admit that he plans to sever relations with the party for which he travelled to Europe in 1916 for a world convention as an American delegate.

"I'm going to register as a Democrat," he finally disclosed. Olson, first Democratic governor of California since the turn of the century, gave Mooney his pardon. Five Republican governors had previously refused to grant executive clemency.

AMERICAN GOES TO BERLIN FOR REFUGEE PARLEY

BERLIN, Jan. 10—(INS)—George Rublee, chairman of the Evian inter-governmental committee on refugees, arrived in Berlin today for further negotiations regarding removal of Jewish and other refugees from the Reich, in the hope of reaching a compromise acceptable to all parties.

The American chairman was accompanied by two other American committee members, Joseph Cotton and Robert T. Pell, and the wives of all three. He said: "We are coming here at the invitation of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht (president of the reichsbank) to continue the conversations begun with him in London."

It was learned that Rublee brought the refugee exodus plan proposed recently by Schacht in London back to Berlin with word that it is "not acceptable" to the refugee committee in its present form, but that it will be used as a basis of discussion in an effort to reach some practical compromise.

KENT, Jan. 10—(INS)—Former Governor Martin L. Davey rested at his home in Kent today after he was given a rousing welcome by residents of the town that started him on his political career.

A parade, lit by bursting bombs and red fire, escorted Davey and Mrs. Davey to the old Kent opera house, where he made his first political speech 25 years ago. The stage of the old building was covered with flowers, leaving little room for the speakers.

In a short speech, Davey said that he "never saw the faces of so many job hunters" as he did in Columbus yesterday at the inauguration of his successor, John W. Bricker.

Among those welcoming Davey were Charles W. Seiberling, Akron industrialist; President K. C. Leebrock, of Kent State university; W. W. Reed, for 22 years Republican postmaster at Kent; Maj. Roy H. Smith, treasurer of the Kent state board of trustees; and H. J. Ehlman, president of the Kent chamber of commerce.

"He wouldn't work," she complained to Special Master Knight hearing her divorce case. "I had a job. When I came home he would be sitting in his chair doing cross-word puzzles."

"He left me in 1928. When I wrote him asking him to come back he answered he was too busy trying to solve a puzzle."

That was 11 years ago and as far as she knows the puzzle is still unsolved.

The master was sympathetic to Mrs. Woodward's complaint and today she had a recommendation for divorce, which in due course of time will become final.

Pepper's Suggestion Of Hurried Confirmation Put Aside

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—(INS)—Opposition to senate confirmation of former W.P.A. Administrator Harry L. Hopkins as secretary of commerce, developed among Democratic senators today as arrangements were made for a public hearing to begin tomorrow.

Hopkins was represented by associates as being glad to accept the senate commerce committee's invitation to appear. A move by Senator Pepper (D) of Florida, for immediate approval of Hopkins' nomination, was met by a storm of opposition at the secret committee meeting yesterday, it was learned.

When several Democratic members definitely indicated they would vote "no" and insisted that public hearings be held, Pepper was said to have withdrawn his motion. One veteran committee member disclosed that if Pepper had insisted on a vote on his motion, the result would have been "close and perhaps against Hopkins."

Jack Benny in Gotham to Explain His Connection With Chaperau's Smuggling

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—(INS)—Bantering Jack Benny, the radio comedian, had a late afternoon appointment with the federal grand jury today to make a voluntary explanation of his association with Albert N. Chaperau, the convicted smuggler.

Apparently little worried and in the best of spirits, Benny arrived at Newark airport last evening after a quick dash from the coast "to get this smuggling business cleared up," as he expressed it. He was accompanied by Myrt Blume, his business manager.

"I don't know anything and I won't know anything until after I've talked with some people," Benny said. "I am not under subpoena. I was called to New York several weeks ago but they didn't want me so I decided to come out again to find out what it's all about."

Plot to Murder Carol Reported

LONDON, Jan. 10—(INS)—The diplomatic correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph reported today that a serious attempt has been made against the life of King Carol of Rumania during the last three or four days, according to advice reaching London.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Bucharest denied this story, stating official quarters at the Rumanian quarter disclaimed knowledge of any attempt against Carol.

It appeared, said the telegraph, that members of the Iron Guard organization plotted the attempt Friday or Saturday and that the circumstances suggested the would-be assassins had confederates within the royal palace.

Following a premature bomb explosion, the telegraph said, members of the revolutionary group began throwing bombs in the Bucharest suburbs, leading to discovery and arrest of the ring leaders.

Drastic action was reported to have been taken, the paper stated, and danger to Carol was believed to have been removed. Anxiety would persist, however, until Bucharest authorities could be certain all the ring leaders had been apprehended, the Telegraph said.

COUNTY BUYS TRUCK

Commissioners purchased a Chevrolet truck for the county engineer's department, Monday, from the Harden-Stevenson Co. The truck equipped as specified was listed at $1,382.90. An allowance of $172.90 was given for a trade in, leaving a difference of $1,210. There were eight bids.

Jack Benny in Gotham to Explain His Connection With Chaperau's Smuggling

It was believed Benny is desirous of telling the grand jury concerning $1,200 in jewelry which he gave his wife and comedy partner, Mary Livingston, and which federal authorities charge was brought to this country by Chaperau.

Chaperau Convicted The debonair Chaperau who described himself as an intimate of many film stars was convicted in double quick time on the first of four smuggling indictments in which he was named.

Federal Judge Murray Hulbert, hearing the case without a jury, rejected Chaperau's claim that he was a Nicaraguan diplomatic attaché and as such entitled to bring in jewelry and finery without the usual customs payments. George Burns, the radio star, and Mrs. Elma N. Lauer, wife of Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer, have already pleaded guilty.

FUNERAL RITES ARRANGED FOR WRECK VICTIM

Funeral services for Gloria Aldenderfer, 16 months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Aldenderfer, Ashville Route 2, will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moody, Springfield township, Ross county. Burial will be in Green Lawn cemetery, Chillicothe.

The little girl died of a broken neck Sunday night when the car driven by her father was in a collision on the Walnut creek pike about six miles north of Circleville.

Mrs. Aldenderfer is in Berger hospital suffering from a fractured right leg, fractured ribs, cuts and bruises. Mr. Aldenderfer, who suffered a broken jaw, a concussion, cuts and bruises, was discharged Monday afternoon from the hospital. Leroy, 3, who was bruised, was also discharged. The mother's condition was reported satisfactory.

Jack Benny in Gotham to Explain His Connection With Chaperau's Smuggling

Chaperau's conviction on all four counts of the indictment renders him liable to a maximum prison term of eight years and a $25,000 fine. One count charged a conspiracy with Mrs. Lauer and the remaining three embraced the actual smuggling.

Burns and Chaperau are both named in two other indictments on one of which Chaperau was scheduled for trial tomorrow. These charge Chaperau smuggled jewelry valued at $4,885 into the country for Burns who gave it to his wife, Graeie Allen. The fourth indictment alleges a passport fraud.

Chaperau had admitted the facts in the indictment but contended he was a commercial attaché appointed by Dr. Noel Pallais, Nicaraguan consul-general. Judge Hulbert found the appointment was made without authority and had not been recognized by this country's department of state.

Bricker And Finance Chief To Confer On Budget For Biennium

JOINT MESSAGE PLANNED

Confirmation Of Governor's Cabinet Appointments To Be Formality

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10—(INS)—The finance committee of the house of representatives today used the ax on the partial appropriations bill to the tune of $177,000.

Ohio university and Bowling Green university suffered the most drastic reductions as the committee approved the slashing of $62,000 from salaries and students fees at the Athens institutions and $50,000 from salaries and student fees at Bowling Green.

Other cuts included one at Kent State university of $30,000 and at Miami university of $35,000. The reductions were made in salaries and student fees in both cases.

Vast Savings Sought

Action of the committee marked the first step in Finance Director William S. Evatt's campaign to institute vast savings in the operation of state government.

Evatt made the recommendations to the committee and Rep. R. R. Bingham (R-Clinton), chairman of the finance group, quickly convinced the committee that the economical move was warranted.

Meanwhile, Governor John W. Bricker planned further conferences with Evatt on the biennium budget which he expected to have ready for the legislature late this week.

Bricker said he would read his message to the house and senate in joint session probably on Wednesday night. There will be no mention made of the budget, however, Bricker said. A message will be sent to the general assembly on the budget later.

To Meet Leaders

The governor said he planned to meet with legislative leaders tomorrow before preparing his message to the legislature. He planned to send his cabinet appointments to the senate this afternoon for confirmation by the upper house.

From all indications the senate is in favor of the cabinet that Bricker has selected and will confirm the appointments without discussion.

Evatt and Bricker have indicated that the 1939-40 budget will be considerably lower than that for 1937-38.

AMRINE TO WIN NEW POSITION IN WELFARE OFFICE

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10—(INS)—The position of superintendent of corrections in the welfare department was created today by welfare director Charles L. Sherwood, effective Jan. 15 and Sherwood said that W. F. Amrine, of London, former superintendent of the London prison farm, would be given the job.

Action of the committee marked the first step in Finance Director William S. Evatt's campaign to institute vast savings in the operation of state government.

Evatt made the recommendations to the committee and Rep. R. R. Bingham (R-Clinton), chairman of the finance group, quickly convinced the committee that the economical move was warranted.

Meanwhile, Governor John W. Bricker planned further conferences with Evatt on the biennium budget which he expected to have ready for the legislature late this week.

Bricker said he would read his message to the house and senate in joint session probably on Wednesday night. There will be no mention made of the budget, however, Bricker said. A message will be sent to the general assembly on the budget later.

To Meet Leaders

The governor said he planned to meet with legislative leaders tomorrow before preparing his message to the legislature. He planned to send his cabinet appointments to the senate this afternoon for confirmation by the upper house.

From all indications the senate is in favor of the cabinet that Bricker has selected and will confirm the appointments without discussion.

Evatt and Bricker have indicated that the 1939-40 budget will be considerably lower than that for 1937-38.

JUDGE UPHOLDS HALL TRUSTEES IN ROBY CASE

Terwilliger Recalls Pact Of 1892 In Deciding Against Injunction

JANITOR TO KEEP JOB

Board Chairman Denies Rumor That Monday Club May Be Removed

Trustees of the Soldiers' Monumental association have the right to employ and discharge the janitor of Memorial hall.

This was determined Monday afternoon in a ruling by Judge Meeker Terwilliger on a question of law involved in the action brought by Ralph Roby, janitor, seeking an injunction to retain his position. The injunction was denied.

Roby was granted a temporary injunction in Common Pleas court last May after he received a letter from Ralph Ward, president of the board of trustees, stating that his services would not be needed after June 1. The petition said Roby was employed on Oct. 1, 1916 under an ordinance of council. Roby contended that the board has no authority over a city employee.

Mr. Roby will continue to serve as Memorial hall janitor despite the ruling, trustees of the Monumental association explained. The purpose of the action, they said, was to determine who has the authority to employ and discharge the janitor.

Ruling Based on Lease

Judge Terwilliger's ruling was based on the 99-year lease made on Feb. 18, 1892 between the trustees of the Soldiers Monumental association and the city, when the city leased the first floor of the hall. The lease states "The janitor and other employees of said building, except the librarian and assistant librarian to be appointed by the trustees of said Monumental association subject to the approval of city council, and the salary of said janitor and other employees to be fixed by said city council and paid by said city."

"Said janitor or other employee to hold the employment under such appointment and confirmation for one year subject to such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by said trustees and subject to be removed by said trustees at any time for cause, the term of said employment to expire on the 30th day of June of each year."

Judge Terwilliger said the appointment of the janitor in 1937, and for many previous years, had not been approved by council.

"We are not trying to put anyone out of his position," Mr. Ward said. "Mr. Roby will continue to serve as janitor. We wanted to determine who has the authority to control the building."

Reports Denied

Mr. Ward said erroneous reports had been circulated that The Monday Club would be removed from the building. "That is absolutely wrong," he said. He explained also that some persons confused the Soldiers' Monumental association with the American Legion.

Trustees of the Monumental association said the next major problem facing them is to obtain assistance for Mr. Roby in the janitor work of the building.

Trustees of the Monumental association are Robert Young, Earl Smith, Mr. Ward, William Betts, Jr., and E. H. Rausenberger.

PETTENGILL "The Gentleman from Indiana"

POSTSCRIPT TO MR. WILL B. TAXT Washington, D. C.

Dear Will: I started yesterday to answer your question why the earnings of all insurance companies, life, fire, etc., are going down, and why, as a result, you have to pay more premiums for the same protection, or have less protection for the same premiums.

I said, too, that perhaps I could now interest you for the first time in such a dry subject as federal spending, taxation, and a balanced budget. Because they are at the bottom of your problem.

To be in at the beginning. It has been a prime objective of the Administration to drive down money rates. Today I believe there is not a single federal note or bond issue that pays as PETTENGILL much as one percent unless it has a maturity of three years or more. When your insurance company invests your premium payments in this sort of paper it is easy to see that they don't earn much, and that the company is compelled to ask you to make up the shrinkage, either in allowing you less as a premium divided, or in increasing the premium rate itself.

The same cheap money policy has driven down the earnings on all other forms of investment. As you know, if you saved up $1000 and put it in a savings bank or building and loan you used to get say, 4 percent. You now get 1 1/2 percent. And bankers tell me there is no assurance they can continue to pay that.

In other words, whereas your $1000 formerly earned $40, it now earns $15, a loss to you and many millions other thrifty people of more than half. You now have to save $2666 to have the same $40 income you formerly had on $1000. This is another way of saying that thrifty people have to work 2 1/2 times as long to provide the same abundant life for old age or for their widows and children. Your savings bank problem explains your life insurance problem.

There are two reasons for the cheap money policy. One is to encourage people to borrow money, expand business and put men to work. No one can question the patriotism of those who make this the reason. If cheap money had produced good business and solved the relief problem by creating more jobs than men, I think the policy could be defended, even though it

Terwilliger Recalls Pact Of 1892 In Deciding Against Injunction

JANITOR TO KEEP JOB

Board Chairman Denies Rumor That Monday Club May Be Removed

Trustees of the Soldiers' Monumental association have the right to employ and discharge the janitor of Memorial hall.

This was determined Monday afternoon in a ruling by Judge Meeker Terwilliger on a question of law involved in the action brought by Ralph Roby, janitor, seeking an injunction to retain his position. The injunction was denied.

Roby was granted a temporary injunction in Common Pleas court last May after he received a letter from Ralph Ward, president of the board of trustees, stating that his services would not be needed after June 1. The petition said Roby was employed on Oct. 1, 1916 under an ordinance of council. Roby contended that the board has no authority over a city employee.

Mr. Roby will continue to serve as Memorial hall janitor despite the ruling, trustees of the Monumental association explained. The purpose of the action, they said, was to determine who has the authority to employ and discharge the janitor.

Ruling Based on Lease

Judge Terwilliger's ruling was based on the 99-year lease made on Feb. 18, 1892 between the trustees of the Soldiers Monumental association and the city, when the city leased the first floor of the hall. The lease states "The janitor and other employees of said building, except the librarian and assistant librarian to be appointed by the trustees of said Monumental association subject to the approval of city council, and the salary of said janitor and other employees to be fixed by said city council and paid by said city."

"Said janitor or other employees to hold the employment under such appointment and confirmation for one year subject to such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by said trustees and subject to be removed by said trustees at any time for cause, the term of said employment to expire on the 30th day of June of each year."

Judge Terwilliger said the appointment of the janitor in 1937, and for many previous years, had not been approved by council.

"We are not trying to put anyone out of his position," Mr. Ward said. "Mr. Roby will continue to serve as janitor. We wanted to determine who has the authority to control the building."

Reports Denied

Mr. Ward said erroneous reports had been circulated that The Monday Club would be removed from the building. "That is absolutely wrong," he said. He explained also that some persons confused the Soldiers' Monumental association with the American Legion.

Trustees of the Monumental association are Robert Young, Earl Smith, Mr. Ward, William Betts, Jr., and E. H. Rausenberger.

Wayne Morris, Spring Byington, of the films, and Grete Stueckgold, of the Metropolitan Opera, are the graduates of the Hall who will join Bing, Bob, Ken Carpenter, John Scott Trotter's orchestra and the Paul Taylor chorus in the show over the NBC red network at 10 p. m.

Wayne Morris is the movie actor who has turned in the best performances as a boxer in the movies to date. In "Kid Galahad" and "The Kid Comes Back" he looked so good with the gloves on that Jack Dempsey predicted a future in the ring if he would only give up acting.

RADIO HIGHLIGHTS

One of Radio City's oldest rules has been set aside as far as Dave Elman's "Hobby Lobby" broadcasts are concerned. The rule is that studios must be cleared of visitors as soon as possible after a broadcast. However, since the guests on Elman's program bring their hobbies with them, studio visitors are allowed to linger around to look them over.

Lum and Abner make periodic telephone calls to former neighbors in Arkansas to check themselves against possible loss of the rural voice inflections so important to their radio characterizations.

In the throes of publicity picture taking for his new air series, "Honolulu Bound", Phil Baker confessed that he'd never got over the habit of holding his breath when in front of the camera.

True Boardman, "Silver Theatre" author and script adapter, not only burns the midnight oil writing his scripts in longhand, but he usually has to spend the following morning helping his secretary decipher his peculiar scrawl.

Andy Devine, who hates to shave, has an ironclad alibi for appearing at Jack Benny broadcasts looking like a fugitive from a barber chair. His current role in the film "Stage Coach", requires him to grow a full beard.

The four Merry Macs were the three Merry Macs on last week's "Town Hall Tonight". Seems that Ted McMichael, one of the group, inadvertently picked that afternoon to go to the dentist. Suffering after effects of buzzer and drill, he fainted on the subway on the way to the studio and woke up in Brooklyn at just the time that his group was due on the air.

Farm Laborers, Tenants
May Obtain F. S. A. Aid

Pickaway county farm laborers expecting to start farming for themselves next Spring or tenants in need of operating capital may be able to work out suitable arrangements with the farm security administration, Cornell E. Copeland, who has charge of the F.S.A. program in Pickaway and Fayette counties, said today. His office is located in the courthouse at Circleville.

He said he would be glad to talk over management and credit problems with any farm family who might be interested in working out plans with the F.S.A. His office hours are from 8:30 to 4:30 daily.

"The F. S. A. program in this county is a combination of credit and management assistance," Mr. Copeland said. "We furnish short-time loans to farm families needing operating capital and then follow through by assisting them in setting up and following sound management programs which will enable them to use their loans to the greatest advantage."

He added, however, that F. S. A. loans are available only to farm families who cannot obtain credit from other government or recognized private credit agencies. The aim of the F. S. A. program, he said, is to assist such families in rehabilitating themselves and laying the foundations for permanent security.

The loans are made for a maximum of five years and bear five percent interest. Borrowers are required to give chattel mortgages on personal property owned at the time of receiving the loan and on non-expendable property purchased by means of the loan. However, the applicant is not prevented from obtaining a loan through lack of property to offer as security prior to receiving the loan. Major emphasis is placed on his integrity, character and experience as a farmer.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

The dramatic criss-crossing of events in the lives of two pals-from-boyhood who use their legal training for opposite purposes is presented in the Republic Picture, "I Stand Accused," opening tomorrow at the Cliftona Theatre.

This Republic drama presents Robert Cummings and Tom

Beck as two college graduates in law. Poverty and the despair of seeing his loved ones in stress, forces Cummings into the easy money offered mouthpieces by the underworld. Beck, on the other hand, assiduously maintains the scruples and ideals of his barrister's oath, and soon has won a place on the District Attorney's staff.

Swiftly and excitingly the paths of the former deep friends cross and conflict, despite the efforts of Helen Mack who marries Cummings but has fond respect for Beck.

A large supporting cast besides the three stars, includes Lyle Talbot, Gordon Jones, Robert Paige, Leona Roberts, Robert Middleton, Thomas E. Jackson and Harry Stubbs.

AKRON, O., Jan. 10.—(INS)—George Isenman, who set up a barber shop in Akron 67 years ago and piled his trade continuously at the one location, died recently. A native of Alsace-Lorraine, Isenman was 84 when he died.

AT THE CIRCLE

Benny Goodman, prophet of swing music, has compiled a glossary of its jargon.

It resulted from numerous requests for interviews during his recent engagement with his band in Warner Bros.' film musical "Hollywood Hotel," which ends tonight at the Circle Theatre.

The myriad correspondents for American and foreign news services, newspapers and periodicals located in Hollywood, finding the idol of the dancing youth of America conveniently at hand, descended on him.

To them all, the shy maestro of swing talked willingly. But finding himself involved in endless explanations of swing terms, he decided on the glossary, mimeographed it, and took to handing out copies to help interviewers.

Excerpts are:

Sender, hot star or rideman:—the musician who sets the pace or style for the rest of the band.

In the groove:—musicians condition when he is feeling right as he plays.

Cats:—swing musicians.

Schmaltz:—the music of sweet bands.

Jive or swing:—the music of hot bands.

Whacky:—hottest music.

Piston:—a trumpet.

Agony pipe:—a clarinet.

Suitcase:—the drums.

Gobble pipe:—the saxophone.

Push pipe:—the trombone.

Dog House:—the bass viol.

Jam or jam session:—A private gathering of swing musicians to play for their own amusement.

MUSIC HALL

Three esteemed alumni of the Music Hall are guests of Bing Crosby and Bob Burns in the broadcast next Thursday, Jan. 12.

Wayne Morris, Spring Byington, of the films, and Grete Stueckgold, of the Metropolitan Opera, are the graduates of the Hall who will join Bing, Bob, Ken Carpenter, John Scott Trotter's orchestra and the Paul Taylor chorus in the show over the NBC red network at 10 p. m.

Wayne Morris is the movie actor who has turned in the best performances as a boxer in the movies to date. In "Kid Galahad" and "The Kid Comes Back" he looked so good with the gloves on that Jack Dempsey predicted a future in the ring if he would only give up acting.

RADIO HIGHLIGHTS

One of Radio City's oldest rules has been set aside as far as Dave Elman's "Hobby Lobby" broadcasts are concerned. The rule is that studios must be cleared of visitors as soon as possible after a broadcast. However, since the guests on Elman's program bring their hobbies with them, studio visitors are allowed to linger around to look them over.

Lum and Abner make periodic telephone calls to former neighbors in Arkansas to check themselves against possible loss of the rural voice inflections so important to their radio characterizations.

In the throes of publicity picture taking for his new air series, "Honolulu Bound", Phil Baker confessed that he'd never got over the habit of holding his breath when in front of the camera.

True Boardman, "Silver Theatre" author and script adapter, not only burns the midnight oil writing his scripts in longhand, but he usually has to spend the following morning helping his secretary decipher his peculiar scrawl.

Andy Devine, who hates to shave, has an ironclad alibi for appearing at Jack Benny broadcasts looking like a fugitive from a barber chair. His current role in the film "Stage Coach", requires him to grow a full beard.

The four Merry Macs were the three Merry Macs on last week's "Town Hall Tonight". Seems that Ted McMichael, one of the group, inadvertently picked that afternoon to go to the dentist. Suffering after effects of buzzer and drill, he fainted on the subway on the way to the studio and woke up in Brooklyn at just the time that his group was due on the air.

FREE SPEECH—FREE LISTENING

IT IS probably safe to say that in most countries outside of Canada, Britain and France, the people only heard or read such parts of our President's address to Congress as their rulers were willing to let them have. And those parts in most cases would be presented without relation to their context, with misrepresentative headlines and comment, or a matter for an argument on the side of dictatorship. To such people, however, as heard the address as a whole, with incidental radio comments and the audible reaction of the Congress to which it was addressed, it must have been a strange experience. For there was the head of the most powerful nation in the world, addressing a free legislature, with a free public in the background, and not telling the lawmakers what they must do, but merely as an equal branch of government giving an account of his stewardship, saying what he thought it wise to do, and leaving the matter with them.

Still more astonishing, the congressional audience was palpably divided, in feeling and opinion, listening in a courteous but somewhat Missouriian way, applauding with discretion, and sometimes obviously registering dissent from the speaker's line of thought.

It was a good display of Democratic principles from the chief executive; it was also a good picture of liberty in law-making. Imagine such a situation in Germany, Italy, Russia or Japan. Or, for that matter, in Peru or Mexico.

The dictators, of course, think such a situation means weakness. We know it is strength. And we, the oldest democracy in this modern world, will probably be following the same liberal procedure, the same balancing of executive and legislative power, when all these roaring dictators have been swept into the dust-bin of history.

GOOD FLYING

THE year just ended wasn't such a bad one for commercial aviation in this country. Reports by operators show a gain of 15 percent in number of passengers carried and miles flown in 1938 over 1937. Nearly 1,500,000 passengers flew some 90,000,000 passenger-miles. A flock of 391 modern planes—102 of them in international operation by United States carriers—and 1,351 pilots and co-pilots did the job. The assistance of ground staffs should not be forgotten, nor the progress in mechanical efficiency, safety, blind flying and radio guidance.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up and thinking about younger generation and wondering whether or not they have advantages. Up Lima way lives L. S. Galvin, the great publisher, who learned the printing trade and spent his boyhood at Jamestown. On occasion he harks back to those days. Here is part of one of his recent penings:

No furnace, but a good wood-going cook-stove and a base burner using Anthracite that rattled as you filled the huge bucket you scarce could wag. Of course you slept in a window frosted upstairs room in which the biggest heating unit was a candle or coal oil hand lamp. You went to bed usually either in the dark by feel, or by moonlight shining through the uncurtained small panes, eight to the sash, upper and lower.

Did you wash your face in your room? You did not. Seldom even donned clothes but rushed in your heavy flannel-lettes (pajamas not even invented) downstairs to the kitchen stove. The base burner had been turned low for the night so the front room was still cold. Ready for breakfast came call for more wood. So, out into the sleet and snow to the wood house always twenty feet away thru the open.

Toast was a luxury in our house. Too hard to make over the open lid. So breakfast was usually buckwheat cakes, pan cakes or fried mush, with eggs plentiful and country sausage always available. You just made the last school bell only two blocks distant. Rooms there were all heated by huge cannon stoves and you usually got in about the time the janitor was somewhere else, so Teacher sent you forth for a bucket of coal.

There may have been drinking water somewhere in the building but have no such memory. Certainly, there was the pump in the back yard and you pumped and drank from a huge dipper, defying the bugs. Somebody had been to Xenia and told some one that it would be zero by morning. No telephones, only a few pieces of news off the telegraph wires relayed by Jack Christopher, the station agent, or Howard Riggelman who had picked up telegraphy during his loafing hours.

You sat home to "dinner," not lunch. Ate a big healthy meal often of the boiled variety, especially spare ribs which Mother loved. Plenty of homemade bread, with slices double the size of today, always potatoes, usually fried. Jams and jells or spreads as they were called. You slyly sneaked the sugar bowl, and just about covered the jam coated bread, when some one saw and told. You brot in some more wood, cut the kindling for next morning and were just leaving for school when Father stood at the front door waving that ever empty base burner coal bucket.

Supper wasn't much. Mush and milk, rice in quantity or plain scrambled eggs, often with slithers of ham or dried beef saved for that purpose. You got away with almost one apple after supper when told it was time to get to bed, musta been almost 8 o'clock.

Every day in Winter was the same except Saturdays and Sundays. On the former you bob sledged, skated on creek or gravel pit, shinnied on the ice, caught bobsleds or sleighs with your own sled. Sunday you washed your neck and ears, went to Sunday school and growing older also to Epworth League or YPSCE wherever She went.

SHIPMENT OF WHEAT TO SPAIN

WASHINGTON—Plans for sending even more wheat to Spain have been quietly discussed by Administration leaders, and it is possible that a bill may be introduced in Congress to this end.

Precedent for this is an Act of Congress in 1920 giving $15,000,000 worth of wheat to relieve the Soviet Russia famine. This was passed even at a time when relations between the two countries were none too friendly.

Whether more wheat is shipped to Spain will depend upon future Spanish needs and also upon the outcome of the present Franco drive. Administration leaders argue that sending wheat to Spain helps get rid of the American surplus, at the same time relieving acute human suffering.

NOTE—All last Summer German and Italian ships in Spanish ports were loading wheat commandeered by Insurgent forces and sure to be needed by local populations this winter.

GARNER'S "HOG-WASH"

Newsman tried to get a rise out of Secretary Wallace by telling him that Garner had called the AAA program "a lot of hog-wash." Restraining himself, Wallace said: "When the press quotes one man to me, I don't rise to the bait. It has taken me five years to learn that."

Pressed further, however, he delivered himself of this masterly straddle: "It's a shame not to denounce a lie, but I have no comment."

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

When Roosevelt decided on $875,000,000 as his deficiency relief budget, he had before him a confidential economic study which, while generally bullish, warned that there would be little improvement in the unemployment problem during 1939.

Continued unemployment was attributed to two factors—technological developments in industry which are steadily wiping out jobs, and the annual "influx" of new (young) workers seeking employment. The experts estimate the "influx" at around 600,000 a year. Since 1937, the last prosperous year, when there were 7,500,000 jobless, over 1,000,000 new workers of all categories have entered the labor market.

This means that even if 1939 turns out to be as good as 1937, the jobless army still will number eight to nine million.

It was this factor which determined Roosevelt not to hold down relief expenditures. His original plan, when he started working on the budget last fall, was to recommend a $500,000,000 deficiency appropriation. But after examining the business survey, he decided that this figure was too low, and increased it to $875,000,000.

Most Americans are probably convinced by this time that Tom Mooney didn't commit the crime for which he was imprisoned; but what the public thinks of him from now on will depend on the company he keeps.

DIET AND HEALTH

This Is the Reason You Sniffle Now

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

JANUARY 20th is the date of the largest number of colds. It is also the date of the lowest temperature in the United States. So there is a reason for calling colds, "colds."

The incidence of colds is lowest from June 20 to July 28. It begins to rise sharply about the 10th of September. There is another sharp rise in the last week in November, and this rise reaches its peak January 20th. Then there is a gradual and steady fall. March 17th shows about as many colds as November 25th. A drop of 10 degrees increases the incidence of colds nearly one per cent.

These figures were compiled year after year by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, using its employees and their absent days on account of colds as a basis.

Age Is Factor

There is one other important factor in catching cold—age. The largest number of colds occurs in those under four years of age—2400 in a group studied. The rate falls steadily until it reaches 1000 at the ages of 15 to 24. Then, for some reason, it rises again to 1500 at 35 and then falls steadily, so that people at the age of 55 are practically free from colds.

Both these sets of figures have some significance. Cold weather and especially cold damp weather conditions unquestionably play some part in the tendency to catch cold. Just what the mechanism is cannot be agreed on by all students of the question. Perhaps the best explanation is that based on the experiments of Drs. Taylor and Dyrenforth, of Jacksonville, Florida, as detailed in this column a few weeks ago.

Their experiments showed that cold water reduces bodily temperatures more rapidly than cold air, thus lowering resistance. Here the factor of getting wet is explained.

Loss of body heat produces definite changes in the membrane of the nose. There is blanching and reduction of blood supply. The temperature of the inside of the nose may go down as much as 10 degrees when the body is exposed to cold. Certainly these changes lower the resistance of the membrane to infection, and make entrance of the virus of the common cold easy.

The white cells of the blood are also reduced on exposure to cold. These are the cells which fight infections of all kinds.

It is worth noting that exercise while exposed to cold does not produce these changes. So that if you have to get cold and wet these days, keep moving around.

All these data support the old-fashioned ideas about keeping bundled up this weather. It is an especially good plan to wear heavy socks or stockings.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

T. M. P.: "(1) Is buttermilk fattening? (2) Does constipation cause pimples on the face? (3) Is there anything good for blackheads?"

Answer: (1) Buttermilk has a low caloric value and could be considered as a non-fattening food. (2) No. (3) Blackheads are best treated with strong surgical soap and water and the use of a comedone extractor.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

YOU HAVE A PARTNER

IT WILL PAY you to remember that the lady, or gentleman, sitting opposite you is your partner. We are all prone to have too much confidence in our own ability, and not enough in that of our associates, but there are times when we should pass the buck to them. One of these is when defending against a No trump contract. If our own hand is worthless we should play in such a way as to help our mate to make the best possible use of his or her resources.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

BY M. E. CORNE

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Elsie Ritter, a beauty shop operator, taking the place of a friend for a week in the private salon of Mrs. Horace Witherpoon, Sr., finds herself involved in a murder mystery when first the eccentric old lady and later her middle-aged daughter-in-law are found dead under the same hair drier. Elsie was attending each at the time, though out of the salon for a few moments before discovering the old lady's death. A string of emeralds, belonging to Mrs. Witherpoon, Sr., are strangely missing. Certain members of the Witherpoon family, and some of the house guests, strike Elsie as queer. Phil Benson, newspaper reporter and close friend of Elsie, arrives as the police launch their investigation. He immediately phones for Mac McIntyre, head of the Chicago homicide squad, who happens to be in town. Meanwhile Richard and Daphne Witherpoon, children of the second victim, conduct themselves oddly during questioning. The chief of police continues his interrogation of all those at the manor when the two deaths occurred.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

TOOTS LEMOINE looked defiant but anxious beneath her hard-boiled exterior. Hers was one past, I was willing to wager, that would not bear investigation.

Young Richard, his eyes fixed glassily upon the ceiling, appeared listless and indifferent, but the nerve at the base of his temple throbbed violently.

Daphne eased her restlessness by running her fingers through and through her bright hair while she watched Chief Ellis through half-closed lids.

Mr. Horace alone seemed unaffected by Ellis' statement. His expression was absent. I wondered whether he had deeply loved his wife and whether her death had been a great shock and loss to him. It was impossible to tell. Somehow the little man was so detached from life that it was difficult to associate him with any of its joys or sorrows.

"Now you?" Ellis pointed at Reginald Ainsworth.

The beautiful young man of the golden curls met the officer's gaze blandly.

"What are you doing at the Manor? How did you get here?"

"I came by train!" Reginald registered astonishment at such a silly question.

Ellis frowned: "In case you have forgotten," he said quietly, "I am investigating murder! Now, who invited you here?"

"I came with Miss Craig," replied Ainsworth unabashed. "I am a member of her company."

"Oh, an actor!" The chief shrugged as if this explained the whole crazy business.

"I am Miss Craig's leading man."

"All right," Ellis expression registered disapproval of beautiful young men who were actors. "That will do."

The last to be questioned was Henrietta Willoughston. I think the chief purposely saved her until the end. He was more than a little afraid of the half-crazed old maid. He approached her diffidently.

"Do you know anything about this crime?"

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," croaked Miss Henrietta, leaning forward upon her stool. "Take heed! Vengeance is for the Lord!"

"Oh!" Ellis glanced helplessly to Officer Karns.

"Where were you this morning?" he continued hopelessly, seeing that he would get no assistance from the quarter.

"With our Lord!" replied Miss Henrietta startlingly.

"What? Well, that is all."

"If you please, sir!" Hawkins glided silently into the room. He addressed Mr. Horace. "Mr. Middlewaite is in the library."

"Thank you." Slowly Mr. Horace returned to this world. "I will come at once."

"One moment!" commanded Chief Ellis. "Who is Mr. Middlewaite?"

"Mr. Middlewaite is an attorney."

"And what is he doing here?"

"He is here, I presume," replied Mr. Horace with as much show of temper as I ever saw him display, "he is here, I presume, to read my mother's will!"

"In my opinion," Phil was saying seriously, "the disappearance of the emeralds has nothing to do with the murder."

I frowned contemptively. We were sitting in a huddle upon the divan in my sitting bedroom waiting for Mac McIntyre to show up. I dare say we, or rather he, had no business to be in my room, but somehow murder seems to condone the lack of propriety.

The family had adjourned to the library for the reading of the will and the guests had grumblingly returned to their quarters with orders to unpack their bags and hold themselves in readiness for future questioning.

"Maybe you're right," I said after a moment. "I can't see any connection myself unless Mrs. Horace knew the identity of the thief and she was killed to silence her. Personally, I think Toots Lemoine has the emeralds."

"The blonde doll?"

"Th-huh!"

"Why so?"

"Well," I went on to tell him about the conversation I had overheard on the landing and about Toots' visit to the salon and her unguarded admission that she knew of the loss of the jewels.

"Whew!" Phil appeared impressed. "And you didn't get a peek at the man in the case, eh?"

"No."

"Recognize his voice?"

"No-o."

"You have an idea, eh?"

"Oh, Phil!" I got up and walked to the window. "I don't know what to do! I'm afraid it was Mr. Richard."

"Her fiancé, eh?"

I snorted. "Fiance, my eye! She's blackmailing the kid, that's what she's doing. He was as surprised as the rest of us when she came through with her announcement."

"He did seem a mite surprised at that."

"A mite! He was flabbergasted! And he didn't dare deny it, you could tell that!"

"You think he stole the emeralds and gave them to Toots?"

"Oh, I must be mistaken!" I could not understand why I suspected Mr. Richard of theft. He couldn't, wouldn't have taken them not with his grandmother there dead!"

"Just the same," Phil said, "I'd like to search that baby's room!"

"Her room!" I was scornful. "You don't think she'd be dumb enough to hide them in her room, I hope!"

"Well!" He wagged his head. "The whole thing is a mess. I hope Dimore crashes through before long. I'll have to get some sort of story to the Old Man in the next hour or so."

We fell silent.

"Phil!" I exclaimed presently. "I don't understand how Mrs. Horace could have been poisoned! She wasn't under that drier over fifteen minutes and she was perfectly all right until then—just as old Mrs. Witherpoon was all right a few minutes before she died."

"Mrs. Witherpoon! Phil leaped to his feet and slapped his hands against his thighs. "Elsie!" he exclaimed excitedly, "I've got a hunch!"

"You have?"

"Suppose—suppose Mrs. Witherpoon didn't die of a heart attack?"

"What?" I stared at him. Had he suddenly gone crazy? "Why, everyone knows it was a heart attack!"

"Do they?" he demanded, getting more and more excited and dancing about the room like a Hopi Indian chief. "Do they?"

"Dr. Dimore said—"

"Oh, Dimore!" He dismissed the coroner and his verdict with a wave of his hand. "He could have made a mistake, couldn't he? Someone told him the old girl had a bad heart, so what does he do? He takes it for granted she died of a heart seizure!"

I regarded him in growing misgiving. "Oh, no!"

"See!" He was gleefully exultant. "You're doubting already!"

"But who would want to kill her?" I refused to admit my susceptibility to argument.

"Who wouldn't want to? From all I hear the whole family hated her like poison."

"Like poison?" I began to laugh wildly.

"Say!" He shook me roughly. "Cut it! Don't you go off your rocker, too!"

"I—I can't help it!" I struggled to regain control.

"Stop it!" He hit me hard between my shoulder blades. "I stopped it! I gasped for breath."

"All right now," I spluttered and wiped the tears from my eyes.

"Good! Don't take any more of these fits. There's enough nuts around here without adding you to the list. Besides, I'll need your help."

"What can I do?"

"Dunno yet. That's what we have to figure out. Now"—he fished a wad of crumpled copy paper from his pocket and spread it out on the bed table—"we'll begin by assuming that the old girl was done in. That leaves us a first-class motive for the daughter-in-law's murder."

"You mean she suspected—"

"Obvious, isn't it?"

"I—I guess so." He was going too fast for me. I did not believe for a minute that Mrs. Witherpoon had been murdered. It was too fantastic!

"Well, then," he continued, warning to his theme, "let's have a look at our list of suspects. First, Mr. Horace—"

FREE SPEECH—FREE LISTENING

IT IS probably safe to say that in most countries outside of Canada, Britain and France, the people only heard or read such parts of our President's address to Congress as their rulers were willing to let them have. And those parts in most cases would be presented without relation to their context, with misrepresentative headlines and comment, or a matter for an argument on the side of dictatorship.

To such people, however, as heard the address as a whole, with incidental radio comments and the audible reaction of the Congress to which it was addressed, it must have been a strange experience. For there was the head of the most powerful nation in the world, addressing a free legislature, with a free public in the background, and not telling the lawmakers what they must do, but merely as an equal branch of government giving an account of his stewardship, saying what he thought it wise to do, and leaving the matter with them.

Still more astonishing, the congressional audience was palpably divided, in feeling and opinion, listening in a courteous but somewhat Missouriian way, applauding with discretion, and sometimes obviously registering dissent from the speaker's line of thought.

It was a good display of Democratic principles from the chief executive; it was also a good picture of liberty in law-making. Imagine such a situation in Germany, Italy, Russia or Japan. Or, for that matter, in Peru or Mexico.

The dictators, of course, think such a situation means weakness. We know it is strength. And we, the oldest democracy in this modern world, will probably be following the same liberal procedure, the same balancing of executive and legislative power, when all these roaring dictators have been swept into the dust-bin of history.

GOOD FLYING

THE year just ended wasn't such a bad one for commercial aviation in this country. Reports by operators show a gain of 15 percent in number of passengers carried and miles flown in 1938 over 1937. Nearly 1,500,000 passengers flew some 90,000,000 passenger-miles. A flock of 391 modern planes—102 of them in international operation by United States carriers—and 1,351 pilots and co-pilots did the job. The assistance of ground staffs should not be forgotten, nor the progress in mechanical efficiency, safety, blind flying and radio guidance.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up and thinking about younger generation and wondering whether or not they have advantages. Up Lima way lives L. S. Galvin, the great publisher, who learned the printing trade and spent his boyhood at Jamestown. On occasion he harks back to those days. Here is part of one of his recent penning:

No furnace, but a good wood-burning cook-stove and a base burner using Anthracite that rattled as you filled the huge bucket you scarce could wag. Of course you slept in a window frosted upstairs room in which the biggest heating unit was a candle or coal oil hand lamp. You went to bed usually either in the dark by feel, or by moonlight shining through the uncurtained small panes, eight to the sash, upper and lower.

Did you wash your face in your room? You did not. Seldom even donned clothes but rushed in your heavy flannel-lettes (pajamas not even invented) downstairs to the kitchen stove. The base burner had been turned low for the night so the front room was still cold. Ready for breakfast came call for more wood. So, out into the sleet and snow to the wood house always twenty feet away thru the open.

Toast was a luxury in our house. Too hard to make over the open lid. So breakfast was usually buckwheat cakes, pan cakes or fried mush, with eggs plentiful and country sausage always available. You just made the last school bell only two blocks distant. Rooms there were all heated by huge cannon stoves and you usually got in about the time the janitor was somewhere else, so Teacher sent you forth for a bucket of coal.

There may have been drinking water somewhere in the building but have no such memory. Certainly, there was the pump in the back yard and you pumped and drank from a huge dipper, defying the bugs. Somebody had been to Xenia and told some one that it would be zero by morning. No telephone, only a few pieces of news off the telegraph wires relayed by Jack Christopher, the station agent, or Howard Rigglesman who had picked up telegraphy during his loafing hours.

You went home to "dinner" not lunch. Ate a big healthy meal often of the boiled variety, especially spare ribs which Mother loved. Plenty of homemade bread, with slices double the size of today, always potatoes, usually fried. Jams and jells or spreads as they were called. You slyly sneaked the sugar bowl, and just about covered the jam coated bread, when some one saw and told. You brot in some more wood, cut the kindling for next morning and were just leaving for school when Father stood at the front door waving that ever empty base burner coal bucket.

Supper wasn't much. Mush and milk, rice in quantity or plain scrambled eggs, often with slivers of ham or dried beef saved for that purpose. You got away with almost one apple after supper when told it was time to get to bed, musta been almost 8 o'clock.

Every day in Winter was the same except Saturdays and Sundays. On the former you boned, skated on creek or gravel pit, shinned on the ice, caught bobsleds or sleighs with your own sled. Sunday you washed your neck and ears, went to Sunday school and growing older also to Epworth League or YPSCE wherever She went.

SHIPMENT OF WHEAT TO SPAIN

WASHINGTON—Plans for sending even more wheat to Spain have been quietly discussed by Administration leaders, and it is possible that a bill may be introduced in Congress to this end.

Precedent for this is an Act of Congress in 1920 giving $15,000,000 worth of wheat to relieve the Soviet Russia famine. This was passed even at a time when relations between the two countries were none too friendly.

Whether more wheat is shipped to Spain will depend upon future Spanish needs and also upon the outcome of the present Franco drive. Administration leaders argue that sending wheat to Spain helps get rid of the American surplus, at the same time relieving acute human suffering.

NOTE—All last Summer German and Italian ships in Spanish ports were loading wheat commandeered by Insurgent forces and sure to be needed by local populations this winter.

GARNER'S "HOG-WASH"

Newsmen tried to get a rise out of Secretary Wallace by telling him that Garner had called the AAA program "a lot of hog-wash." Restraining himself, Wallace said: "When the press quotes one man to me, I don't rise to the bait. It has taken me five years to learn that."

Pressed further, however, he delivered himself of this masterly straddle: "It's a shame not to denounce a lie, but I have no comment."

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

When Roosevelt decided on $875,000,000 as his deficiency relief budget, he had before him a confidential economic study which, while generally bullish, warned that there would be little improvement in the unemployment problem during 1939.

Continued unemployment was attributed to two factors—technological developments in industry which are steadily wiping out jobs, and the annual "influx" of new (young) workers seeking employment. The experts estimate the "influx" at around 600,000 a year. Since 1937, the last prosperous year, when there were 7,500,000 jobless, over 1,000,000 new workers of all categories have entered the labor market.

This means that even if 1939 turns out to be as good as 1937, the jobless army still will number eight to nine million.

It was this factor which determined Roosevelt not to hold down relief expenditures. His original plan, when he started working on the budget last fall, was to recommend a $500,000,000 deficiency appropriation. But after examining the business survey, he decided that this figure was too low, and increased it to $875,000,000.

Most Americans are probably convinced by this time that Tom Mooney didn't commit the crime for which he was imprisoned; but what the public thinks of him from now on will depend on the company he keeps.

DIET AND HEALTH

This Is the Reason You Sniffle Now

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

JANUARY 20th is the date of the largest number of colds. It is also the date of the lowest temperature in the United States. So there is a reason for calling colds, "colds."

The incidence of colds is lowest from June 20 to July 28. It begins to rise sharply about the 10th of September. There is another sharp rise in the last week in November, and this rise reaches its peak January 20th. Then there is a gradual and steady fall. March 17th shows about as many colds as November 25th. A drop of 10 degrees increases the incidence of colds nearly one per cent.

These figures were compiled year after year by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, using its employees and their absent days on account of colds as a basis.

Age Is Factor

There is one other important factor in catching colds—age. The largest number of colds occurs in those under four years of age—2400 in a group studied. The rate falls steadily until it reaches 1000 at the ages of 15 to 24. Then, for some reason, it rises again to 1500 at 35 and then falls steadily, so that people at the age of 55 are practically free from colds.

Both these sets of figures have some significance. Cold weather and especially cold damp weather conditions unquestionably play some part in the tendency to catch cold. Just what the mechanism is cannot be agreed on by all students of the question. Perhaps the best explanation is that based on the experiments of Drs. Taylor and Dyrenforth, of Jacksonville, Florida, as detailed in this column a few weeks ago.

Their experiments showed that cold water reduces bodily temperatures more rapidly than cold air, thus lowering resistance. Here the factor of getting wet is explained.

Loss of body heat produces definite changes in the membrane of the nose. There is blanching and reduction of blood supply. The temperature of the inside of the nose may go down as much as 10 degrees when the body is exposed to cold. Certainly these changes lower the resistance of the membrane to infection, and make entrance of the virus of the common cold easy.

The white cells of the blood are also reduced on exposure to cold. These are the cells which fight infections of all kinds.

It is worth noting that exercise while exposed to cold does not produce these changes. So that if you have to get cold and wet these days, keep moving around.

All these data support the old-fashioned ideas about keeping bundled up this weather. It is an especially good plan to wear heavy socks or stockings.

Answer: (1) Buttermilk has a low caloric value and could be considered as a non-fattening food. (2) No. (3) Blackheads are best treated with strong surgical soap and water and the use of a comedone extractor.

YOU HAVE A PARTNER

IT WILL PAY YOU to remember that the lady, or gentleman, sitting opposite you is your partner. We are all prone to have too much confidence in our own ability, and not enough in that of our associates, but there are times when we should pass the buck to them. One of these is when defending against a No trump contract. If our own hand is worthless we should play in such a way as to help our mate to make the best possible use of his or her resources.

Had he done this, declarer's lone stopper would have been knocked out pronto. South could have taken only seven tricks before trying clubs. When he finally did, East could have run enough hearts to set the contract.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

BY M. E. CORNE

READ THIS FIRST:

Elsie Ritter, a beauty shop operator, taking the place of a friend for a week in the private salon of Mrs. Horace Witherspoon, Sr., finds herself involved in a murder mystery when first the eccentric old lady and later her mid-aged daughter-in-law are found dead under the same hair drier. Elsie was attending each at the time, though out of the salon for a few moments before discovering the old lady's death. A string of emeralds, belonging to Mrs. Witherspoon, Sr., are strangely missing. Certain members of the Witherspoon family, and some of the house guests, strike Elsie as queer. Phil Benson, newspaper reporter and close friend of Elsie, arrives at the police launch their investigation. He immediately phones for Mac McIntyre, head of the Chicago home squad, who happens to be in town. Meanwhile Richard and Daphne Witherspoon, children of the second victim, conduct themselves oddly during questioning. The chief of police continues his investigation of all those at the Manor when the two deaths occurred.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

TOOTS LEMOINE looked dejected but anxious beneath her hard-boiled exterior. Hers was one past, I was willing to wager, that would not bear investigation.

Young Richard, his eyes fixed glassily upon the ceiling, appeared listless and indifferent, but the nerve at the base of his temple throbbled violently.

Daphne eased her restlessness by running her fingers through and through her bright hair while she watched Chief Ellis through half-closed lids.

Mr. Horace alone seemed unaffected by Ellis' statement. His expression was absent. I wondered whether he had deeply loved his wife and whether her death had been a great shock and loss to him. It was impossible to tell. Somehow the little man was so detached from life that it was difficult to associate him with any of its joys or sorrows.

"Now you!" Ellis pointed at Reginald Ainsworth.

The beautiful young man of the golden curls met the officer's gaze blandly.

"What are you doing at the Manor? How did you get here?"

"I came by train!" Reginald registered astonishment at such a silly question.

Ellis frowned: "In case you have forgotten," he said quickly, "I am investigating murder! Now, who invited you here?"

"I came with Miss Craig," replied Ainsworth unabashed. "I am a member of her company."

"Oh, an actor!" The chief shrugged as if this explained the whole crazy business.

"I am Miss Craig's leading man," "All right," Ellis' expression registered disapproval of beautiful young men who were actors. "That will do."

The last to be questioned was Henrietta Willoughston. I think the chief purposely saved her until the end. He was more than a little afraid of the half-crazed old maid. He approached her diffidently.

"Do you know anything about this crime?"

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," croaked Miss Henrietta, leaning forward upon her stool. "Take heed! Vengeance is for the Lord!"

"Oh!" Ellis glanced helplessly to Officer Karns.

"Where were you this morning?" he continued hopelessly, seeing that he would get no assistance from that quarter.

"With our Lord!" replied Miss Henrietta startlingly.

"What? Well, that is all."

"If you please, sir!" Hawkins gilded silently into the room. He addressed Mr. Horace. "Mr. Middlewaite is in the library."

"Thank you," Slowly Mr. Horace returned to this world. "I will come at once."

"One moment!" commanded Chief Ellis. "Who is Mr. Middlewaite?"

"Mr. Middlewaite is an attorney."

"And what is he doing here?" "He is here, I presume," replied Mr. Horace with as much show of temper as I ever saw him display, "he is here, I presume, to read my mother's will!"

"In my opinion," Phil was saying seriously, "the disappearance of the emeralds has nothing to do with the murder."

I frowned contemptuously. We were sitting in a huddle upon the divan in my sitting bedroom waiting for Mac McIntyre to show up. I dare say we, or rather he, had no business to be in my room, but somehow murder seems to condone the lack of propriety.

The family had adjourned to the library for the reading of the will and the guests had grumblingly returned to their quarters with orders to unpack their bags and hold themselves in readiness for future questioning.

"Maybe you're right," I said after a moment. "I can't see any connection myself unless Mrs. Horace knew the identity of the thief and she was killed to silence her. Personally, I think Toots Lemoine has the emeralds."

"The blonde doll?" "Uh-huh!"

"Why so?" "Well—and I went on to tell him about the conversation I had overheard on the landing and about Toots' visit to the salon and her unguarded admission that she knew of the loss of the jewels."

"Whew!" Phil appeared impressed. "And you didn't get a peek at the man in the case, eh?"

"No."

"Recognize his voice?" "No-o."

"You have an idea, eh?" "Oh, Phil!" I got up and walked to the window. "I don't know what to do! I'm afraid it was Mr. Richard."

"Her fiancé, eh?" I snorted. "Fiance, my eye! She's blackmailing the kid, that's what she's doing. He was as surprised as the rest of us when she came through with her announcement."

"He did seem a mite surprised at that."

"A mite! He was flabbergasted! And he didn't dare deny it, you could tell that!"

"You think he stole the emeralds and gave them to Toots?" "Oh, I must be mistaken!" I could not understand why I suspected Mr. Richard of theft. "He couldn't, wouldn't have taken them home with his grandmother there dead!"

"Just the same," Phil said, "I'd like to search that baby's room!" "Her room!" I was scornful. "You don't think she'd be dumb enough to hide them in her room, I hope!"

"Well!" He wagged his head. "The whole thing is a mess. I hope Didiore crashes through before long. I'll have to get some sort of story to the Old Man in the next hour or so."

We fell silent.

"Phil!" I exclaimed presently. "I don't understand how Mrs. Horace could have been poisoned! She wasn't under that drier over fifteen minutes and she was perfectly all right until then—just as old Mrs. Witherspoon was all right a few minutes before she died."

"Mrs. Witherspoon!" Phil leaped to his feet and slapped his hands against his thighs. "Elsie!" he exclaimed excitedly. "I've got a hunch!"

"You have?" "Suppose—suppose Mrs. Witherspoon didn't die of a heart attack?"

"What?" I stared at him. Had he suddenly gone crazy? "Why, everyone knows it was a heart attack!"

"Do they?" he demanded, getting more and more excited and dancing about the room like a Hopi Indian chief. "Do they?"

"Dr. Didmore said—" "Oh, Didmore!" He dismissed the coroner and his verdict with a wave of his hand. "He could have made a mistake, couldn't he? Someone told him the old girl had a bad heart, so what does he do? He takes it for granted she died of a heart seizure!"

I regarded him in growing dismay. "Oh, no!"

"See!" He was gleefully exultant. "You're doubting already!"

"But who would want to kill her?" I refused to admit my susceptibility to argument.

"Who wouldn't want to? From all I hear the whole family hated her like poison."

"Like poison?" I began to laugh wildly.

"Say!" He shook me roughly. "Cut it! Don't you go off your rocker, too!"

"I—I can't help it!" I struggled to regain control.

"Stop it!" He hit me hard between my shoulder blades. I stopped it! I gasped for breath.

"All right now," I sputtered and wiped the tears from my eyes.

"Good! Don't take any more of those fits! There's enough nuts around here without adding you to the list. Besides, I'll need your help."

"What can I do?" "Dunno yet. That's what we have to figure out. Now"—he fished a wad of crumpled copy paper from his pocket and spread it out on the bed table—"we'll begin by assuming that the old girl was done in. That leaves us a first-class motive for the daughter-in-law's murder."

"Obvious, isn't it?" "I—I guess so." He was going too fast for me. I did not believe for a minute that Mrs. Witherspoon had been murdered. It was too fantastic!

"Well, then," he continued, warning to his theme, "let's have a look at our list of suspects. First, Mr. Horace."

"Mr. Horace?" Now I knew he was kidding. "Mr. Horace wouldn't hurt a fly!"

"Oh, you can't tell about these meek as Moses guys," he said quickly. "Maybe he has a Dr. Jekyll complex."

"But why should he want to kill his mother?" I demanded. "Men don't go around poisoning people just for the fun of it."

"Dunno yet. Maybe she left him a wad of dough. I'll have to look into that."

"I think you're insane!" I declared. "You haven't the slightest evidence!"

Ohio's Rural Residents Promote Extension Work

Home economics extension work in Ohio meets the varied needs of women in every locality because individual women and groups of women assist each year in planning the work, according to Miss Minnie Price, state home demonstration leader, Ohio State university.

Miss Price gives credit to the 42 county home economics councils in the state as being major forces in making home economics extension practical. Each county council contains from 12 to 50 members who represent communities or organizations. Each one of these members voices the opinions of the women she represents when the home economics work program is planned for the year.

Women in some Ohio counties may want instruction in refinishing furniture, but other county

STARS SAY—

For Tuesday, January 10

A VERY lively and interesting day is forecast from the ruling lunar directions. While there is decided promise of advancement, promotion or the preferment or friendly support of superiors, employers or others in influential positions, particularly in the launching of new projects, there also are menaces from treachery, subtlety or fraudulent machinations. It is strongly advised that extraordinary care be taken with contracts, documents and all writings.

Those whose birthday it is are in line for promotion, favors, the solid support of employers, superiors and those in power, who may contribute to the launching of meritorious new projects. But there are omens of trickery, fraud and undercover manipulations that are sinister and dangerous. Be specially cautious with all writings, documents and contracts which should be referred to dependable attorneys.

A child born on this day may be very active, enterprising and have constructive ideas. It should enlist support from superiors or large interests. It may, however, lean to the "clever," smooth or easiest way, resorting to stratagem or expediency when it serves.

son of Clarksburg were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wolf of N. Washington street.

Mrs. Charles LeMay of Commercial Point was a Monday shopper in Circleville.

Mrs. Fred Cook of Walnut township shopped in Circleville, Monday.

of them attended the National Rural Home Conference in Lexington, Kentucky, last Fall.

The Ohio staff of home demonstration agents has grown from six in 1921 to 46 in 1938. The four counties which have home agents but no organized council do have informal groups of women who serve the same purposes and do the same work as the councils. These groups of women are indispensable when there is a change of home agents in a county.

A home demonstration agent who began work in a strange county would lose months of time if there was no continuing group of women who are familiar with the work done in the past and with the plans made for the future. The new agent can become acquainted with the county rapidly by visiting a council member in each community, and can begin her duties with a minimum loss of time.

ODDS ON HENRY AS FIGHT NEARS ON WEST COAST

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—(INS)—Despite much current gossip that Henry Armstrong, the only fighter to hold three different championships in boxing history, will be far from his best when he meets Baby Arizmendi in defense of his welterweight crown at the Olympic arena tonight, he was, nonetheless, a heavy favorite today as weighing-in time neared.

As recognized by the Californian state athletic commission, the fight will be for the world's championship, and it will be the fifth meeting of the pair.

To date, the score stands two victories and two defeats each, the rivalry extending over a period of five years.

It's a unique fight in that it finds a couple of natural 132-pounders fighting for the 147-pound title. That means that both will have to come in over 135 to protect Armstrong's lightweight laurels.

For Armstrong it will be the chance to squelch local gossip that he has been skidding of late, that he is tired and weary from a lot of fighting during the last 12 months. But many of the boys in the know claim that such gossip should be taken with a large grain of salt.

DEMARET TAKES $1,650 AS PRIZE IN GOLF EVENT

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—(INS)—"So they wouldn't invite Texas Christian to play in the Rose Bowl" muttered broadshouldered young Jimmy Demaret, pride of Houston, before the start of the Los Angeles Open golf tournament—and today Jimmy travelled North, the winner of California's greatest money tournament by the widest margin recorded since the inception of that tournament back in 1926 and richer by $1,650.

His score of 66-68-71-69—274 gave him a seven stroke lead on Harold McSpaden, of Boston, who took second with 281.

McSpaden nosed out last year's tournament winner, Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee, in spectacular fashion, pitching a mashie shot into the cup for an eagle 2 at the 430 yard eighteenth hole—while 3,000 spectators roared—and Demaret, who was playing with him, bowed to the ground. It gave Jug a 281 and a two stroke lead on Thomson, who finished with a 73 for a total of 283.

RED AND BLACK TEAM INVADERS ASHVILLE COURT

Old Rivalry To Be Resumed With Kauber's Lads

Favored

An old rivalry, one that has survived through many years, will be renewed this evening when Circleville and Ashville cage teams tangle on the latter's court. The game will be the feature of three, the first starting at 7:15 between the reserve teams of the two schools.

Ashville's record is one of the most impressive the team has rung up in several years. No Pickaway county team has been able to hold the quintet coached by Al Kauber to even a close score, although the Walnut and Pickaway township boys came closer than other opponents. Coach Kauber has put together a versatile quintet, one in which either of three boys may go on a scoring rampage. Nance and Hoover play forward and guard, respectively, and fit in perfectly with Kauber's scheme of things.

They feed Junior Gregg, Wimp Walden and Barney Rose throughout the whole game and once in a while break into the clear on their own account. In Gregg, Walden and Rose, the Ashville club has three outstanding cagers all of whom are good enough to be on anyone's basketball team.

Juggling Possible

A possibility was seen today that Circleville's starting lineup may be somewhat juggled when the whistle blows for the first tipoff. By his recent showing, Bob Bowsher rates a lot of consideration for a guard spot, and so do Harold Smith and Joe Staley for forward positions. Staley, who was ill, has been slow in rounding into his best condition, but he'll be playing his best against Ashville. He came to Circleville from Ashville during the last Summer. It is possible, though, that the same five that has been getting the call will swing into action at the start of tonight's fray.

After the first preliminary, girls of Ashville and Amanda will play, the varsity game to come next.

Probable lineups: Circleville Ashville Davis . . . . . F. . . . . Hoover Heffner . . . . . F. . . . . Gregg Walters . . . . . C. . . . . Walden Bumgarner . . . . . G. . . . . Nance Hughes . . . . . G. . . . . Rose Referee: Griffith.

ODDS ON HENRY AS FIGHT NEARS ON WEST COAST

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—(INS)—Despite much current gossip that Henry Armstrong, the only fighter to hold three different championships in boxing history, will be far from his best when he meets Baby Arizemendi in defense of his welterweight crown at the Olympic arena tonight, he was, nonetheless, a heavy favorite today as weighing-in time neared.

As recognized by the California state athletic commission, the fight will be for the world's championship, and it will be the fifth meeting of the pair.

To date, the score stands two victories and two defeats each, the rivalry extending over a period of five years.

It's a unique fight in that it finds a couple of natural 132-pounders fighting for the 147-pound title. That means that both will have to come in over 135 to protect Armstrong's lightweight laurels.

For Armstrong it will be the chance to squelch local gossip that he has been skidding of late, that he is tired and weary from a lot of fighting during the last 12 months. But many of the boys in the know claim that such gossip should be taken with a large grain of salt.

DEMARET TAKES $1,650 AS PRIZE IN GOLF EVENT

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—(INS)—"So they wouldn't invite Texas Christian to play in the Rose Bowl" muttered broadshouldered young Jimmy Demaret, pride of Houston, before the start of the Los Angeles Open golf tournament—and today Jimmy travelled North, the winner of California's greatest tournament by the widest margin recorded since the inception of that tournament back in 1926 and richer by $1,650.

His score of 66-68-71-69—274 gave him a seven stroke lead on Harold McSpaden, of Boston, who took second with 281.

McSpaden nosed out last year's tournament winner, Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee, in spectacular fashion, pitching a masher shot into the cup for an eagle 2 at the 430 yard eighteenth hole—while 3,000 spectators roared—and Demaret, who was playing with him, bowed to the ground. It gave Jug a 281 and a two stroke lead on Thomson, who finished with a 73 for a total of 283.

RED AND BLACK TEAM INVADERS ASHVILLE COURT

Old Rivalry To Be Resumed
With Kauber's Lads
Favored

An old rivalry, one that has survived through many years, will be renewed this evening when Circleville and Ashville cage teams tangle on the latter's court. The game will be the feature of three, the first starting at 7:15 between the reserve teams of the two schools.

Ashville's record is one of the most impressive the team has rung up in several years. No Pickaway county team has been able to hold the quintet coached by Al Kauber to even a close score, although the Walnut and Pickaway township boys came closer than other opponents.

Coach Kauber has put together a versatile quintet, one in which either of three boys may go on a scoring rampage. Nance and Hoover play forward and guard, respectively, and fit in perfectly with Kauber's scheme of things.

They feed Junior Gregg, Wimp Walden and Barney Roese throughout the whole game and once in a while break into the clear on their own account. In Gregg, Walden and Roese, the Ashville club has three outstanding cagers all of whom are good enough to be on anyone's basketball team.

Juggling Possible

A possibility was seen today that Circleville's starting lineup may be somewhat juggled when the whistle blows for the first tipoff. By his recent showing, Bob Bowsher rates a lot of consideration for a guard spot, and so do Harold Smith and Joe Staley for forward positions. Staley, who was ill, has been slow in rounding into his best condition, but he'll be playing his best against Ashville. He came to Circleville from Ashville during the last Summer. It is possible, though, that the same five that has been getting the call will swing into action at the start of tonight's fray.

After the first preliminary, girls of Ashville and Amanda will play, the varsity game to come next.</ out a public hearing or inviting Hopkins to appear, as "50-50." Several committeemen insisted that the nomination "take the usual course"—an invitation to the nominee to appear as well as others who desire to be heard.

Chairman Batley (D) of North Carolina, suggested that Hopkins be heard first.

Several committeemen were known to be desirous of questioning Hopkins on the report that he said: "We will spend, tax and elect." Newspaper writers who quoted Hopkins to the effect might be requested to testify.

Batley said it was likely that Hopkins will be asked about alleged "W. P. A. in politics." He said he anticipates committeemen will want to question Hopkins on the Sheppard-Senate campaigns investigating committee that W. P. A. had participated "unjustifiably" in the last November senatorial elections.

Senator Sheppard (D) of Texas, chairman of the special committee which filed the report revealing widespread participation of W. P. out a public hearing or inviting Hopkins to appear, as "50-50." Several committeemen insisted that the nomination "take the usual course"—an invitation to the nominee to appear as well as others who desire to be heard.

Chairman Batley (D) of North Carolina, suggested that Hopkins be heard first.

Several committeemen were known to be desirous of questioning Hopkins on the report that he said: "We will spend, tax and elect." Newspaper writers who quoted Hopkins to the effect might be requested to testify.

Batley said it was likely that Hopkins will be asked about alleged "W. P. A. in politics." He said he anticipates committeemen will want to question Hopkins on the Sheppard-Senate campaigns investigating committee that W. P. A. had participated "unjustifiably" in the last November senatorial elections.

Senator Sheppard (D) of Texas, chairman of the special committee which filed the report revealing widespread participation of W.P.A. personnel in the Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Tennessee elections, is a member of the commerce committee, as is Senator White (R) of Maine, another member of the Sheppard committee.
